

LETTERS TO E.C.F.E. PROGRAMS

Letters to organizations, such as E.C.F.E., that work with preschool age children are a great way to reach young mothers. Other organizations to contact might be daycare associations, preschool centers, Mothers of Preschoolers (MOPS) and daycare centers. These organizations are usually willing to promote the activities we do that help our communities. They are often available to partner with on projects. You may use this letter as a guideline; making any changes to better fit your chapter and community. Use chapter letterhead if it is available.

Dear _____,

My name is _____ and I am president of the _____ Women of Today. We are a non-profit, community volunteer organization that promotes community involvement, fundraising for communities and foundations, leadership training and fellowship through knowing other members in the community. We currently have chapters in 116 communities around the state, including (your community and surrounding areas, if appropriate).

We are looking for a contact, which is possibly you, to discuss how the Women of Today can work together with ECFE. As a former ECFE parent, I value the services that ECFE has to offer families and see many similarities with what Women of Today like to offer families as well.

The areas I see that we can help each other are many; our chapter hosts many public events throughout the year that are free to children of the community, such as our _____. You could assist by helping spread the word about our events, which will give us more successful projects, and the town a better sense of community. In reverse, I'm sure you sponsor several events for those who attend your programs and the Women of Today may be able to repay the favor by working face painting booths, etc.

We, as an organization, highly promote the youth of our community and I see a definite link between what we do. As mentioned above, another facet of our organization is leadership training, and should the parents coming to these events decide that would like to join our organization, it would definitely be beneficial to them. As a mother of _____ years, I feel that my experiences and training with Women of Today, along with my ECFE classes, have made me a better parent, more patient, able to multi-task and more.

I'd love the opportunity to discuss with you some of the ways we could partner. You can reach me at (---) xxx-xxxx. I look forward to hearing from you.

Thank you for your time.
Sincerely,

Your Name
President, Anytown Women of Today
